Sensory Expansion and Challenge

Development

Infant and toddler development (0-3 years) is deeply linked to daily experiences, play, and social interactions. Through engagement with people and objects, they build skills organically. Driven by innate curiosity and growing abilities, they actively explore using senses, movement, and early communication. Providing a nurturing, stimulating environment with responsive adult support is essential.

Support

According to the development patterns of infants and toddlers aged 0-3 years, they are divided into seven stages: 0-36 months. Age-appropriate equipment is designed to match key milestones—such as standing support, assisted walking, climbing, stair ascent/descent, sliding, swinging, balancing, and jumping.

Outdoor Playground

Outdoor activities are a key to exploring the world. Children are naturally curious about raw wood. Climbs, balance beams, and jumps offer thrilling fun while enhancing imagination, creativity, play skills, and physical health. The Robinia series uses North American robinia wood—debarked, planed, sanded, and stripped of perishable sapwood—leaving only durable heartwood. This creates a challenging, multi-functional play environment that develops sensory and motor skills in nature.
